Immanuel Lutheran Church To Observe Double Anniversary

The Immanuel Lutheran Congregation of Mokena, one of the oldest in the county, was organized November 4, 1850 near Frankfort.

Caspar Wannemacher, John Geuther and Henry Werner were chosen elders, and the Rev. Weiler was called to serve the new congregation as its first pastor. He was succeeded by the Rev. E. Hieber Sr., who served the congregation for 41 years.

In 1915 the congregation moved to Mokena, where the corner-stone of a new church building was laid in October of that year. In the following year, the building was completed by Contractor Geo. J. Hacker and on March 19 it was dedicated under the direction of Rev. R. Reinke of Blue Island.

Rev. E. Zucker of Beecher, preached the sermon. Over 700 people witnessed the dedication services.

The first resident pastor, Rev. W. Kemnitz, was called in 1918. He was succeeded by Rev. D. Hennig in 1924, by Rev. Schauer in 1930 and by the present pastor, Rev. W. J. Geffert in 1932. The present officers of the congregation are:

Elders George Abbe, Wm. Bernard, F. Wannemacher, President.

Nick Geuther, Secretary, H. Triebe, Financial Secretary, Ed. Schaefer and Treasurer, C. Wolter.

In observance of this double anniversary, special services have been arranged for next Sunday Nov. 10. The Rev. R. Reinke of Blue Island has been engaged to preach in the morning service beginning at 10 a. m., and the Rev. D. Hennig, in the evening service beginning at 8 p. m.

The Immanuel Congregation welcomes all friends and neighbors who can find it possible to join in this celebration.

Village Board To Look Into Halloween Prank Cases

The Mokena Village Board will meet next Tuesday night. Among the matters to be considered are a building code and what disposition to make of the cases against seven local boys caught in Halloween pranks which involved the placing of a truck in the street near the Edw. Schmidt place and throwing tomatoes at people.

Board members feel some drastic action should be taken and the offenders brought to justice.

Bremen township as a whole went Democratic for the head of the ticket, Roosevelt receiving 3054 votes and Willkie 2818. Green for governor, however, carried Bremen township by 493 votes.

Tinley polled fully 95 per cent of its registered vote.

Orland Township Goes Republican

In Tuesday's election Orland went 2 to 1 Republican. The returns from the three precincts in the township showed the following results:

Precinct 1 130 straight Democratic votes, and 221 straight Republican.

Precinct 2 62 straight Democratic votes, 159 straight Republicans.

Precinct 3 62 straight Democratic votes and 179 straight Republican.

The Republican vote was overwhelmingly for Willkie, Green and Brooks.

Radio Station Seeks Biographies of World War Vets

The editor is in receipt of the following letter from Martin O'Brien, manager of radio station WMRO in Aurora and we hope the information he desires will be furnished by some of our readers:

"It is our thought to read a brief biography of every soldier, or marine in your area who died during the world war.

"We are also dedicating an appropriate musical number to the memory of the Veteran. We believe that your paper can be of tremendous assistance to us, and we suggest that you make a front page story of the fact that you are cooperating with this station and request relatives of deceased Veterans in your area to send these biographies either direct to WMRO or to you so that you can forward them to us.

"I am very certain that with the increased emphasis on military affairs the surviving relatives of the Veterans in your area will be appreciative of your interest in this manner, and will be glad to cooperate in keeping alive the memory of these valiant Americans who have given their lives in the service of our country.

An Appeal For Red Cross Membership

Next Monday November 11th, marks the beginning of a national 19-day drive for the annual Red Cross membership Roll Call.

Your special attention is called to the 1940 insert enclosed in this week's NEWS-BULLETIN. On the back of this insert is a partial list of the past year's service record of the American Red Cross for the preservation of life and prevention of suffering. Do not give this description just a passing glance, but read it carefully and also note the subsequent articles appearing in this newspaper for the next three weeks.

From them you will learn that the nation is now confronted with the growing responsibility arising from the national defense program and increased demands for its day-to-day services of disaster, relief, first-aid and life saving. In these articles you will also learn to what extent the Red Cross benefits us locally in Mokena and its surrounding territory.

Chairman Norman H. Davis of the Red Cross, stated recently that "while the generous response to the war-stricken peoples has enabled the Red Cross to ship tons of medicines, foodstuffs and clothing to the war zones, it becomes necessary at this time to support those services benefiting the United States."

In the 1939 local drive, Mokena responded to the Roll Call with 52 members. Our minimum quota for this year is 75 members, and if you once become fully aware and convinced of the necessity of your individual help to America's greatest organization for assistance to humanity, you will not hesitate to become a member and be proud of the fact, that thru your efforts, no matter how small, the Red Cross can accomplish the purpose for what it stands and the services it renders. The local unit of the Red Cross is the Chapter and branches.

Mokena is a branch of the Will County Chapter located in Joliet. The national organization and its Chapters are financed solely by contributions from the public. It never has been financed by the government. The national organization receives from the Chapters 50 cents of each annual membership. These membership dues make up the annual income of the national organization. The other 50 cents of each annual membership is retained in the local Chapters funds for local services. The Roll Call of members of the American Red Cross is held each year, and from it the national organization and Chapters gain their financial support from the public. The only other appeals for support are infrequent disaster relief fund appeals, when the funds contributed go entirely for relief in disasters.

Types of Membership in the Red Cross are as follows: annual, one dollar; contributing, five dollars, sustaining, ten dollars; supporting, twenty-five dollars.

The services rendered by the Red Cross are many sided. An illustration of one of such services is being given at present in Mokena by a registered Red Cross Nurse to a class of housewives on "Home Hygiene and care of the Sick" and held weekly for a period of twelve weeks in the Wm. Semmler home.

A number of ladies have declared their willingness to act as Volunteer Red Cross workers to put the Roll Call over the top in Mokena and vicinity. Their names as authorized workers for this drive will appear in the next weeks issue of this paper.

Hundreds At Tinley Methodist Church Dedication Services

Sunday, being a balmy, beautiful Indian Summer day, it was a big factor in enabling hundreds of people to attend the dedication of the beautiful new Methodist church in Tinley Park.

Norman Hardinger, local radio man hooked up an amplifying system in the church tower and the music from the electric organ in the church was broadcast thruout the village from 10 a. m., to 10:30 when the congregation assembled in front of the church door while the keys of the new edifice were turned over to the Chas. Drake Skinner, District Superintendent of the Joliet-Dixon district.

As the District Superintendent and the congregation entered the edifice, Edna Oaks Matheson of Chicago, sang a response to the Superintendent's greetings, following which the congregation joined in singing "O Thou whose Hand hast Brought Us."

The dedication service opened with a prayer by the Rev. Murray H. Leiffer. The prayer was offered by Rev. Lawrence E. Weinreich, the pastor of the church.

Edna Oaks Matheson sang two solos "Just For Today" by Seaver and "Consider the Lilies" by Topliff. The choir also rendered several anthems.

The Dedicationary sermon was preached by Rev. Charles Drake Skinner, Superintendent Joliet-Dixon district.

At the close of the service the president of the Church Board of Trustees, Mr. Conrad Andres, the official board and the building committee assembled at the altar and presented the sanctuary.

Rev. Mr. Skinner made the acceptance address.

The church was decorated with beautiful baskets of chrysanthemums.

At the close of the morning services, a delicious baked ham dinner was served at 12:45 o'clock in the social hall. Long rows of tables with floral centerpieces lined the spacious hall and hundreds of people were served.

The same afternoon at three o'clock the dedicationary services were continued, the services opening with prelude: "Ave Maria" by Schubert. Rev. John M. Schneider, Superintendent of the Chicago-Western District, read the new Testament lesson.

A very beautiful feature of this service was the baptismal service in which the following were baptized by Rev. L. E. Weinreich: Janet Withrow Bartlett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Bartlett, Theodore Keith and Thomas Hugh, twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Dunham, Charles Reese, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. James, Susan May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Johnson, Gerald Lindy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyndell W. Miller, Harold Lee, Ermae Ann, son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold A. Peterson, Judith Lynn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Roe, Steeve Arthur, son of Mr. and Mrs. Axel Rydberg, Joy Betty Berg, daughter of Harold Berg.

Mr. Milton sang a solo which was greatly enjoyed and appreciated by the large congregation.

Rev. John W. Holland, W. L. S. radio minister was the speaker for the afternoon. In his message Rev. Mr. Holland made especial reference to Tinley Park as his first church many years ago, and well remembered his first sermon here when the congregation numbered about 25 souls. Some of the old time members of that far away day are now attending the new church.

As the late afternoon sun was streaming thru the stained glass windows, two sparrows flew in and chirped and fluttered about the beams of the ceiling thruout the service.

Surprised With Bridal Shower

Miss Bernilda Stuckey was very pleasantly surprised when her local 4-H club leader asked her to call at her home Tuesday evening, Oct. 28. As she opened the door her friends, 24, greeted her with a loud surprise.

The home was beautifully decorated with flowers, autumn leaves and the brides chosen colors of blue and white. Two candles were lighted in between which stood her picture.

Mrs. Emil Kampe and Miss Elvira Stuckey, sister of the bride to be who were the hostesses, escorted the couple to their respective chairs over which hung a beautiful sprinkling can decorated in blue and white.

Just before the opening of the gifts Mrs. Kampe read a lovely poem.

Many lovely gifts were received along with a bit of advice from each friend. Crazy bunco was then played and the winners in turn presented them to the bride to be.

A delicious lunch was served, after which the guests departed, having had a most enjoyable time.

Words, Slogans, Played Important Role During Hectic War Years of 1914-1918

By JAMES R. MOCK and CEDRIC LARSON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

We had gone to war—World war I. We had decided to send our boys over to France to save democracy. But even as indignation against Germany had surged higher and higher in those last tense days before 3:12 a. m., April 6, 1917, no one could say just what the American people would do after their eloquent leader had urged them into war.

The great majority of Americans, it seemed, wanted to fight, but people wondered anxiously how large and how determined the minority might be.

In the World war of 1914-18, words and slogans played an important role in the struggle of the nations for victory. Just how important that role was, has been the subject of a book, "Words That Won the War," written by James R. Mock and Cedric Larson. The accompanying article is a condensation of that book and is presented because of interest now centering around another European war. When opinions are expressed they are the opinions of the authors and not necessarily of this newspaper.

Minorities are dangerous when the fate of civilization is hanging in the balance. How could we count on the millions of Germans, Austrians, Hungarians, Poles, Russians and other "aliens in our midst"? Wasn't there something very disquieting in the widely quoted opinion of Dr. Ales Hrdlicka that the Melting Pot had failed to melt? How many people still believed there was such a thing as being too proud to fight? How many remembered the President's statement that there was no essential difference in the expressed war aims of the belligerents? What of enemy spies, of whom there were said to be 100,000 or more at large, and their allies, the pacifists, Socialists and labor agitators? What about the success of Wilson's campaign slogan, "He kept us out of war"? What about warnings against entanglement in Europe's quarrels which still echoed in countless homes?

And what, above all, about the unknown thousands of Americans who might not feel very strongly one way or the other but thought Europe was a long way off and might find it too much bother to make the sacrifices which a modern war demands of the entire population?

We had pledged "our lives, our

The authors of the book, "Words That Won the War," point out the two above examples of information work done in the World war of 1914-18, as appeals that are "not too academic." Ideas of this type appeal directly and do their selling lesson quickly without any subtle reasoning.

fortunes, and our sacred honor," but could we fulfill that pledge? When a peaceful nation, jealous of individual liberty and proud of its freedom from militarism, attempted to mobilize its men, money, resources, and emotions for one mighty effort, even a rather small minority could bring disaster. "Widespread co-operation" was not good enough when the nation's life was at stake. Nothing less than complete solidarity would do.

U. S. Not Unified.

America was not unified when war was declared. The necessary reversal of opinion was too great to be achieved overnight. The agonizing question in official Washington, the question on which hung the fate of the country's entire wartime effort, was whether the inner lines at home would hold as effectively as the lines in France.

The committee on public information was assigned the staggering task of "holding fast the inner lines." The story of how it fulfilled that mission is a dramatic record of vigor, effectiveness, and creative imagination. The committee was America's "propaganda ministry" during the World war, charged with encouraging and then consolidating the revolution of opinion which changed the United States from anti-militaristic democracy to an organized war machine. This work touched the private life of virtually every man, woman, and child; it reflected the thoughts of the American people under the leadership of Woodrow Wilson; and it popularized what was for us a new idea of the individual's relation to the state.

Committee's Creation.

President Wilson created the committee on public information by executive order dated April 13, 1917, and appointed George Creel as civilian chairman, with the secretaries of state, war, and navy as the other members. Mr. Creel assembled as brilliant and talented a group of journalists, scholars, press agents, editors, artists, and other manipulators of the symbols of public opinion as America had ever seen united for a single purpose. It was a gargantuan advertising agency the like of which the country had never known, and the breathtaking scope of its activities was not to be equalled until the rise of totalitarian dictatorships after the war.

News was the life-blood of the committee on public information (CPI)—news from the front, from training camps, from the White House, from farms and factories, from workers' homes, from every place that had a story to tell regarding the American people in the war.

Press Co-operation.

As George Creel and many other people have repeatedly emphasized, press co-operation with the CPI and its support of the war rested on a "voluntary" basis, but with impressive legal authority behind it. This authority was gradually extended, by congressional and presidential action, as the war progressed, and by the time of the Armistice the government's potential control of the press was nearly complete. A self-denying ordinance by Mr. Wilson and Mr. Creel was all that stood in the way of an attempt to impose a harsh, rigorous, and thoroughgoing censorship.

Even before the CPI, an agreement for voluntary censorship had been reached by representatives of the press and of the departments of state, war and navy. Then, on April 16, 1917, 10 days after declaration of war and three days after creation of the CPI, Mr. Wilson backed this up with a warning proclamation regarding "Treason and Misprision of Treason," stating, among other things, that the courts had found to be treasonable "The performance of any act or publication of statements or information which will give or supply, in any way, aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States."

President Wilson had favored adequate censorship power all along, but for the first 53 days of the war (that is, from April 6 to May 28) selection of news was very largely a matter of the editor's individual discretion. He was subject to laws against treason and his good sense normally told him what might and what might not be published. Then on May 28 came the "Preliminary Statement," in which the CPI codified rules but still depended upon existing laws for its authority.

News Classifications.

"Dangerous" news included stories of naval and military operations in progress; movement of official missions; threats and plots against the life of the President; news regarding secret service and confidential agents; movements of alien labor. Naval information in the forbidden category included the position, number, or identification of Allied or American warships; certain data pertaining to lights and buoys; mention of ports of arrival or departure; any details of mines or mine traps; signals, orders, or wireless messages to or from any warship; all phases of submarine warfare; facts regarding dry-docks. Forbidden military information included any relating to fixed land defenses; movements of American or Canadian troops; assignment of small detachments; concentration at ports; aircraft and equipment that was, or might be, in the process of experimentation.

In general, editors were warned against feeling that because facts were generally known in a local district it was therefore safe to give them publication. Editors were also charged to examine, with the same care that they devoted to news, the contents of advertising copy, and even paid reading notices. And of course everyone was to guard against indiscriminate publication of maps, charts, and pictures.

So the fighting with printer's ink was carried on vigorously on many fronts during the war, with George Creel as editor-in-chief.

Epinephrine Injections For Asthma

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NOW that the cause of many cases of asthma has been found—sensitiveness or allergy to some food or other substances, and also nose and throat defects—there is less written about treatment of the asthmatic attacks. True, there is much being written about the treatment of severe attacks by breathing in pure oxygen, and the use of ether enemata.

What about the ordinary attacks that last from minutes to hours and make life miserable for patient and family?

There is nothing so quickly effective in relieving asthmatic attacks as epinephrine, extract of the adrenal gland. Within 5 to 15 minutes after an injection of epinephrine under the skin, the attack gradually subsides and the patient is perfectly well again.

Dosage Prescribed.

Dr. M. B. Cohen, in Ohio State Medical Journal, points out that it is now necessary to use the large doses of epinephrine usually prescribed, that is 10 to 15 minims (drops.) This dose sometimes causes reactions that are more alarming to the patient than the attack itself. He therefore suggests that but three to six minutes of the usual 1 to 1,000 solution be injected under the skin. "The attack will subside in most cases in a few minutes; if it does not, the dose should be repeated in 20 minutes."

What can be done to prevent attacks of asthma while the cause is being sought?

Dr. Cohen states that in many cases injecting four or five minims of epinephrine under the skin every three or four hours, day and night, will prevent asthmatic attacks and less of the epinephrine will be needed than if the physician waits for the coming of the attack before giving it.

Facts Regarding Angina Pectoris

YOU may wonder as to just what difference exists between coronary thrombosis and angina pectoris.

In coronary thrombosis there is an actual blocking of the vessels supplying the walls of the heart. The blocking may be due to a blood clot, a small piece of tissue from some vegetable-like growths at valves of the heart, or to thickened lining of the blood vessel itself. As this condition may last for hours or days, the pain in coronary thrombosis (under breast bone and up into left breast) may last for hours or days. There is some real damage present.

In angina pectoris there may be some of the same kind of damage present, but often there is no damage or alteration present in the heart itself or nearby vessels, but nevertheless, something is interfering with the blood getting to the heart muscle. As the heart muscle is not getting enough blood (enough nourishment), it cannot do its work and there is a tight, viselike pain present. By standing still, thus not asking the heart to pump as much blood, the pain usually passes away in a few minutes.

This pain is under the breast bone and is exactly the same—and caused in the same way—as the pain we get as youngsters when we were running or taking exercise, before we got our "second wind."

Cause of the Attacks.

It was formerly thought that all attacks of angina pectoris were due to effort or exercise, but it is now known that excitement, anger, walking into the cold air, or a heavy meal may bring on the attacks.

Sir Thomas Lewis in his book, "Diseases of the Heart," has encouraging words for those afflicted with these attacks following effort. He states that the expectation of life in these does not differ very greatly from those who do not have these attacks.

In other words, in the majority of cases, if these individuals will exercise, eat, and have control of their emotions within reasonable limits, their life line will be as long as the average for their age.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What is kaolin and what is it used for?

A.—Kaolin is a clay in powder form. It is used in dusting powders and for intestinal disturbances.

Q.—Does insulin cure diabetes?

A.—No. But insulin enables the blood to hold and use more sugar which otherwise would be thrown out of the body in the urine. By the use of this sugar the patient is enabled to live on as long as he takes the insulin.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Johnson, Farley and Glass in unusual campaign rolls . . . Preparations for "Hemisphere defense" under way.
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—One of the curious angles of the recent presidential campaign was the desperate effort of both parties to get certain men to come out in the open and speak, and of getting other men to keep quiet.

Of course, in each instance one party tried to get the man to speak, and the other party tried to persuade him to keep quiet.

The latest development was the decision of Hiram W. Johnson to make a radio speech against the third term. It may be recalled that in 1932 the California senator actually advocated the election of Roosevelt. Johnson's caustic disapproval of Herbert Hoover had a good deal to do with that.

In 1936 Johnson said nothing, either for or against. He had soured quite a bit on Roosevelt after his first blush of enthusiasm. But he was not particularly keen about Alf M. Landon. So he just kept quiet.

DISREGARDS PARTIES

Johnson has been almost as unimpressed by the notion of party regularity as the late William E. Borah, probably due to his battles with the old Republican machine in the days of W. H. Crocker in California. In 1912, showing his disregard of party regularity, he was the nominee for vice president on the Progressive ticket with Theodore Roosevelt, at which time, by the way, Franklin Roosevelt voted for him.

In 1916, Johnson became an abomination to all regular Republicans because so many of them blamed him for the defeat of Charles E. Hughes for the presidency. This had lots of interesting repercussions. There is scarcely a doubt that if Johnson had made a few speeches for Hughes in 1916, he would have been nominated at some later time for the presidency by the Republican party.

In 1920, it was bitter recollection of what had happened in 1916 that kept Johnson from having a chance for the nomination, though he had made a much better showing than any other Republican in the presidential primaries. It was at that same convention, by the way, that he twice refused a chance which would have made him president by succession. He declined to run for vice president with Philander C. Knox, and then again with Warren G. Harding. Both men died well within the four years.

GLASS CAUSED ANXIETY

But Johnson was only one of many men who have been subject to much pulling and hauling to get them on the stump or to keep them quiet this year. Outstanding in the group was James A. Farley, the man who organized the campaign which nominated Roosevelt in 1932, and who ran the successful Roosevelt campaigns of 1932 and 1936. Farley was violently against the third term. But he is tremendously regular.

Sen. Carter Glass of Virginia was another whose silence caused a great deal of anxiety. Right after the Chicago convention, where the great Virginian opposed the third term in placing Farley in nomination, Senator Glass announced that he would vote for Roosevelt. But he explained that he felt an obligation to vote for the nominee because he had been a delegate to the convention which nominated him.

PREPARE FOR DEFENSE

With an eye to an impregnable hemisphere defense, Washington officials are seeking to establish a network of New world army, navy and air force bases strengthened by diplomatic and military agreements.

Such a co-ordinated system of air, sea and land defenses is being discussed by diplomats representing nations on both continents. The United States is seeking to convince its neighbors that any agreement would be entirely voluntary. Use of the bases would not affect original sovereignty, and the whole affair would be co-operative, rather than one-sided.

In line with this plan, the United States invited Latin-American collaboration in the use of the eight Atlantic bases offered this country by Great Britain.

According to present plans, the United States would provide the money and, in the beginning, the land, sea and air equipment.

Diplomats deny that any specific bases have been mentioned in the discussions or that negotiations have reached any definite stage. But then, diplomats are generally reticent to discuss the progress of negotiations until agreements have been concluded.

Every Citizen Holds High Public Office In Dellview, Nation's Smallest Town

This is Main street of Dellview, N. C., a duly incorporated town with a total population of eight. The building houses the town's one industry, Henry Dellinger's woodwork shop, which is also used as the town hall. At the left Chief of Police Tom Dellinger may be giving a parking ticket to the town's only male resident who doesn't hold office—although that is unlikely as it is his son.

DELLVIEW, N. C.—Stray dogs with a taste for chicken are responsible for the existence of this duly incorporated town, the smallest census enumerators have found anywhere in the United States. Its city directory contains only one surname, Dellinger. Its population, which has not varied during the 15 years of its existence, is eight.

Dellview was created by act of the state legislature in 1925. At that time three Dellinger brothers operated a large chicken farm. But due to the inadequacy of the county dog laws—or, at least, to the inadequacy of their enforcement—dogs from nearby farms played havoc with the business. Hardly a night passed that squawks from the hen houses did not disturb the Dellingers' sleep. Hardly a morning dawned that feathers were not found scattered over the Dellingers' farm.

It was then that brother Davis P. Dellinger, who practiced law in nearby Cherryville but owned an interest in the farm, came to the rescue. As a member of the legislature he did not want to impose on his rural constituents stricter dog laws than they desired but as a chicken raiser he wanted relief. So he conceived the idea of incorporating the farm as a town and the bill passed the legislature without a hitch.

All that was necessary then was to pass town ordinances against dogs running at large, make the farming Dellingers town officers and arm them with shotguns.

Ten years ago the destroyed the chicken business and the Dellinger farm was put back in crops. But Dellview remains an incorporated town, complete with municipal government even if it doesn't contain but two families—Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dellinger and their son Rebert, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dellinger and their daughters Vilma, Marie and Gladys.

Persons of Voting Age

Show Large Increase

The number of persons of voting age in the country has increased by 11,234,376 in the last decade, according to the figures of the U. S. census bureau, although the total population gain was only 8,634,835. The reasons for this, census experts believe, are a declining birth rate and a lengthening of the life span due to medical advances and modern sanitation practices.

Ready, Lynn took one last swift look around the apartment. It was her good-bye to it. But they did not leave. It was Marty again who answered the door. He thought it was the orchids he had ordered for Lynn. But it was not. It was a cable. Lynn, standing there ready, motioned to Marty to open the message with a trembling hand. The message was terse, seven short words: "Rene Bouchier died 11 o'clock, American Hospital."

Slowly he handed it to Lynn. She could not believe it.

"Cruel!" she cried.

It was to Marty, crying unashamed, that Lynn turned now for comfort. So it came about, Lynn Morrow did not sail after all.

That night after Marty left, Lynn began her unpacking wearily. There was a front-page story that night in all the newspapers. Rene, the rising young genius, was dead.

To Lynn it seemed incredible that his genius was stilled forever. Just when life promised everything for him. She chided herself that she had not gone to Rome with him.

"I would have looked after him. This never would have happened."

But all this was too late.

"He knew he was going to die!" Lynn, weeping alone, hoped desperately he had known she was coming to him. Life must go on.

But life had changed for Lynn. Something had gone out of it. It seemed strange to be in a world without Rene. Lynn had only one burning regret now, that she had not been a wife to him. He had needed her and she had failed him.

Just after New Year's Day Chuck and Helen asked Lynn to have a quiet dinner with them at their club. Helen wrote that the matter was important.

"We're leaving for Algiers at the end of the week and we want to see you, anyway," she wrote.

Lynn hesitated; she had gone no place since Christmas. But Helen was so insistent that she finally agreed. Helen had warned her to look her prettiest, and, as Lynn dressed, she looked at her white face with disfavor. She chose a black frock—she could not force herself to wear anything else—and Chuck sent her some yellow orchids. She felt she would be a disappointment to Helen, and to the friend whom Helen wanted her to meet that evening. Helen was such a darling, always plotting. Lynn smiled wanly. What was the use?

Chuck was waiting for her and, had she looked, she could have seen the admiration in his eyes. She always took his breath away when he had not seen her in a long time.

"They're waiting in the bar, Lynn. You look gorgeous!" He gave her hand a squeeze, unable to mention Rene. Her sad eyes told him more than she could say.

"Be nice to this fellow we have at dinner, Lynn," he warned as they took the elevator up to the bar. Lynn smiled. Chuck was so obvious in his excitement. He looked so happy, Lynn was herself content. At least he had solved his troubles.

When Lynn joined Helen and her guest she was surprised to find him fat and old. His name was Arnold Katzman. The four chatted over a cocktail and went on into the formal club dining room. Helen was bursting with excitement. Katzman hardly seemed to notice Lynn at all. He listened to her conversation casually. It was not until coffee was on the table that he said suddenly:

"How old are you?"

"Twenty."

"Good."

He grinned at Helen. "You're a smart woman, Mrs. Austin. I'm usually suspicious of my friends." He lit a huge cigar and leaned back.

"How'd you like to have a movie test?"

"Movie test?" Lynn set her cup down suddenly. She looked at Helen's beaming face.

"Isn't it wonderful?" Helen demanded. "I knew it all along. I used to think of it when we were in Florida, Lynn. You're so lovely. It seemed such a natural thing!"

Chuck was as excited as his wife. "Now, now, you two. Don't get Miss Morrow's hopes up too high. I've seen some lovely women fall down completely before a camera."

"Lynn won't." Helen was confident.

"We'll see."

Lynn leaned forward: "I'm not sure I'd like to go to Hollywood."

Katzman looked at her over his cigar. "You're the only woman in America who doesn't!" he said shortly. "You'll like it. You're the type."

Lynn's mobile face was serious. "I don't know that I can act."

"You don't have to act, when I turn one of my real directors loose on you. We'll make you act, all right," Lynn smiled at him suddenly.

"And with that smile . . ." Katzman thumped his cigar on the edge of his plate. "With that smile, you ought to do all right!" So it was settled just that casually. Later, Katzman went along to another appointment, and left the three friends together.

"I wanted to some way repay you, Lynn." Helen's face was serious now. "Happy?" Lynn smiled across at her.

"So happy it hurts!" Chuck answered for her.

"Buddy's asked about you. He remembers your hair, Lynn," Helen went on. "Mother Austin has been so kind. Weren't we fools to have wasted those two years!"

Chuck touched Helen's hand as it lay on the table. "We learned something anyway!"

Lynn promised to see Helen and Chuck off at the end of the week when they sailed.

When their sailing day came, however, Lynn did not go. At the last moment, her courage failed. She could not face Mr. and Mrs. Austin Sr. So she sent them a long farewell wire, promised to cable the results of the test which was scheduled for the following day.

Lynn was horribly nervous when she walked into the New York studio of Superior Pictures.

She tried to learn the scene which they handed her. Now that the test had come, she wanted desperately to succeed.

The director came over to her. "Try and think of something pleasant and far away. Keep your mind flexible, and try not to see or hear anything around you."

The camera was turning. Lynn began haltingly, her hands stiff. She looked down at them in surprise.

It was over, almost before it seemed to have begun.

Helen's bracelet was around her wrist. She wanted to succeed for Helen. And for herself, too.

Her ringless hands were quieter now. They did not seem so terribly awkward to the girl. Ringless. She could still see the glint of green of Wild's emerald. But that was a long time ago.

Her eyes were soft and bright. Even in that blinding light she could see the funny little technician watching, a pot-bellied, homely little man. He seemed to be following the strange words she was speaking with his lips. People were kind sometimes. Suddenly a far, breaking smile came over Lynn's lips.

"Cut!"

It was over, almost before it seemed to have begun. It was years, and yet no time at all. She leaned heavily against a chair.

"Is that all?"

"Yes."

CHAPTER XXXV

It was a week before Lynn heard anything from the studio. Then one morning when she was at work for Wellington, somebody from Mr. Katzman's office called. Could Miss Morrow come to the office? Miss Morrow could not. She was working. Lynn finally arranged to get to Katzman's office at 5 o'clock. Wellington agreed to that. He was frankly annoyed at the talk of Hollywood. It was with bad grace he allowed Lynn to leave early.

When she walked into Katzman's office at 5:30, the secretary told her to wait. It was a half hour before she was finally taken into the office of the big producer. With him were two other men. They eyed Lynn appraisingly. Whether they were pleased with the girl they saw, she could not tell. Katzman came to the point promptly.

"Your test was all right," he said abruptly. Then he began asking her questions. Finally he said: "When can you leave for the Coast?"

"The Coast?"

"Hollywood."

"I . . ." Lynn was too confused at the swift-moving events to realize what he meant.

"We're offering you a contract."

"But I have one with Mr. Wellington, the artist."

"What does it say?"

"I don't know; Mr. Siedenberg knows about it."

Katzman called his secretary: "Get Marty Siedenberg right away. Get him down here." His face was grim. "We'll wait."

In that long hour they waited for Marty to arrive, Katzman talked with Lynn.

"I want to know something about you," he said. "Any parents?"

"No."

"Married?"

"No." Lynn's mobile face was troubled.

"Out with it."

"I am a widow. I was married to Rene Bouchier."

"Who's he?"

"An artist, a very good artist. He died in Rome just after Christmas."

"Humph! I want to tell you one thing. If you come with us, no bad publicity. We won't stand for it a minute. Can't afford scandal in our studios."

Lynn listened in a daze.

"You need somebody to look after you. Think I'll put you under Lawrence's wing. She's smart. You better live with her, for a while anyway."

"Who is she?"

"My secretary. A tartar. She'll make you toe the mark."

So it went. Lynn found herself telling Katzman all about her early life, her sister. Of Rene, she found it impossible to speak. These men did not understand that he was a great man.

"You've had a lot of publicity here in New York." He got out a book of clippings. "What about this Austin guy?"

"Nothing."

"If we take you, we want a long-term contract. Your life won't be your own any more, you know. You must make up your mind to that."

When Marty came, breathless and excited, they settled down to a business conference. It must have been 8 o'clock when Lynn finally protested all the legal talk:

"I'm hungry."

"We'll feed you in a little while. Just be patient."

Marty, Katzman and Lynn left together, got into a cab and went over to Katzman's suite in the Towers. The view from the fortieth floor was magnificent. Katzman ordered an elaborate dinner, and he and Marty continued their talk. Only when Lynn was freshening up for dinner did Katzman talk freely to Marty about her.

"She's a find. I can make her the most talked-of woman in the world today! I know it. I'm almost never wrong. She's marvelous. Some day the world will say she's a great actress."

Marty was silent. The thought of New York without Lynn was insupportable to him. Yet he knew Katzman was right. He had always known.

"She'll go far."

"You're in love with her?"

"Yes."

"Then you'd better keep an eye on her. She needs it."

Then Lynn came back and the conversation stopped. It was not until after dinner that Katzman's man came back from his interview with Wellington.

"He was tough to crack."

"Did you get it?"

"Yes."

There was telephoning, dispatches for a secretary. Finally the lawyers were there again. Marty and the lawyers and Katzman talked some more. Lynn curled up in a chair and looked at Katzman's expensive magazines. There was one which had a photograph of her on the back cover.

It was a long time before they were ready for Lynn's signature on the contract. Marty was acting for her. She had complete faith in him.

"Now, Lynn, this is a five-year contract. It gives you $200 a week for the first year. Then it increases heavily for the next years. I feel that's fair. We know you're going places, but the first year Katzman won't realize much on you," Marty explained carefully. Obediently Lynn signed.

Katzman ordered up champagne, and together they all drank. Katzman, beaming, tired and perspiring, turned to Lynn. He lifted her hand and kissed it: "To a new star, my dear. In three years, there won't be a woman in America who doesn't envy you."

Marty folded up her contract and put it into her handbag.

"Now about plans. How soon can you leave for the coast?"

"Any time," Lynn answered.

"Tomorrow?"

Lynn laughed. This man was amazing. "Hardly tomorrow."

"A week from today then?" Lynn hesitated.

"Certainly she can. A week from today," Marty answered for her. The sooner the better, if she must go. She had lost enough time already. So it was arranged.

Finally Marty and Lynn escaped into the snowy streets.

"Let's walk over to Broadway, Marty." Together they strolled along, Marty holding her hand.

"Lynn! It's happened. I always knew it would." They were like excited children. After a while they found themselves over in Times Square. As they rounded the corner from Forty-fourth Street Marty held Lynn back and pointed over at the Paramount Theater where the name of Marlene Dietrich was blazing in lights.

"Honey, in a year yours will be up there. In a year or two you can have anything you want in this world."

"Not anything, Marty," she corrected him, her eyes misty.

"You're still in love with that Austin guy? You women!" He shook his head. Lynn did not answer. She spoke of Rene then.

Old-Time Gambler

Lucky Both Ways

Wins at Cards and Love

Like Story Book Romance.

MEMPHIS.—All the well-mannered professional gamblers who divided their winnings with captains of luxurious Mississippi river steamboats apparently were not heartless crooks.

David Holmes, who piloted steamboats when they were the chief means of travel, remembers one of the old-time card sharks who parted with $3,000 of his winnings to aid a good cause—and, incidentally, win the hand of the woman who once jilted him.

Jim Baxter was the gambling hero of a storybook river romance. He became a gambler when the girl he loved, Ruth Ann Robinson, married another. When her husband was killed in the Civil war, Ruth Ann was left with two children to manage a plantation.

"She was doing all right until the Yankees took all of her slaves," Holmes said. "One of the leaders of those slave raids was like Sommers, I've been told. When he found Ruth Ann in need of money, he lent it to her from time to time, securing it with a mortgage on the plantation."

"After the war, Sommers was holding a note for $3,000 on the plantation, and he warned her that when it was due he would foreclose unless it was paid."

Ruth Ann went to Memphis, but failed to obtain aid. Returning to her plantation on a packet named the Autocrat, she met Jim Baxter.

"Well, sir, Baxter decided to let Ruth Ann have the money," Holmes continued. "But he made her promise that when Ike Sommers showed up to collect the money that she would stand at a window in her house and wave to him."

"Ruth Ann kept her promise. Just when Sommers left, she stepped up to the window and waved a handkerchief."

"Next morning, a stranger rode up to Ruth Ann's house, dismounted and approached her on the porch. He handed her a package."

Ruth Ann opened the package—and found the same $3,000 that she had paid to Ike Sommers.

Jim Baxter played the winning hand in his game with Sommers, and from that day on Jim didn't put much faith in the old saying, "lucky at cards, unlucky at love."

He and Ruth boarded the Autocrat at Memphis a few days later and went to New Orleans on their honeymoon.

Youth Waiting for Ride
Gets Fast One by Plane

BOSTON.—A young fellow here thinks he thumbed the fastest ride on record.

He was standing on the Southern Artery one afternoon when Dana Fitzgerald, a radio announcer, spied him.

"Where are you going?" asked Fitzgerald, stopping his car.

"Hyannis," replied the youth. "But it looks as though I won't make it tonight. Been waiting at this corner for almost an hour."

"Hop in," said Fitzgerald. The youth did so.

Fitzgerald sped across Neponset bridge to nearby Dennis airport. His private plane was waiting for him, and he told the pop-eyed hitchhiker:

"Get in and we'll be at the Hyannis airport before five o'clock."

EL PASO.—Police officials experience many erratic incidents in line of duty, but Captain Gaylord, deputy sheriff in charge of the El Paso county jail, believes he witnessed the most unusual he ever will, recently.

A small, dark man walked up to him in the jail and said, "I give up."

"What for?" the officer asked.

"This," said the man, holding out a newspaper clipping telling of a wife who was stabbed in the neck and whose husband crossed the border into Mexico shortly afterward.

"That's me," the little man said. "Oh . . . well, come right in," Gaylord gasped. "We can fix you up, I guess."

The man was held in jail pending investigation.

Tempted by the sight of cherries on a tree in his yard, Keck got a ladder and proceeded to go after the fruit. A few minutes later he found himself on the ground, looking skyward. Uninjured except for a slight leg bruise, Keck has decided to leave tree-climbing to the younger folk.

THE GOLDEN RULE

LESSON TEXT—Luke 6:27-38.
GOLDEN TEXT—As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye also to them likewise.—Luke 6:31.

Hiding in a dark cellar will not stop the sun from shining; it will only deprive us of its warmth and life-giving power. Likewise the failure of mankind to receive and practice the great principles of Christian faith does not alter nor weaken them, even though it does deprive humanity of their blessing.

It may seem foolish to some to observe an Armistice Sunday in the midst of a world at war, to talk about the golden rule in a selfish world where men hate one another, but the fact is that now is the time to really proclaim the solution of God for man's problems. Then too, let us remember that the failure of mankind as a whole to receive the truth of God does not hinder us from receiving it as individuals. Our relationship to God is an individual matter, even though we also belong to a race or nation. Our lesson presents

I. A Great Christian Principle (vv. 27-31).

The magnificent breadth of this principle of Christian consideration has often been lost sight of in argument over the detailed interpretation of verses 29 and 30. Surely there is not in mind here any casting to the winds of an intelligent appraisal of the needs of those to whom we give; nor is there any thought of a self-glorifying turning of another cheek in physical combat. It does not teach that our nation may not defend itself against those who attack us. At the same time we must note that it means much more than most of us are willing to read into its words.

What does it mean? It means that in the spirit of Christian love we will give of ourselves and our substance in "large handed but thoughtful charity." It means love for our enemies—no small withholding even from unreasonable people. It means doing unto others what we would have them do unto us. It "requires that we should sell to others as we desire that others sell to us . . . that we buy of others as we desire others to buy of us . . . that we talk about others behind their backs as we desire that others should talk about us . . . Are we doing it?" (Dr. John W. Bradbury).

The Golden Rule is not the Gospel. No one is saved by living according to it; in fact, that is quite impossible apart from faith in Christ.

II. Its Divine Foundation (vv. 32-35).

The so-called golden rules of men lack the divine element of grace and are all in the negative. Confucius said, "Do not do to others what you would not want them to do to you." Others spoke similarly, but Jesus, building on the divine love which does good to even the evil and the unthankful (v. 35), gives a positive admonition of gracious consideration of others.

We are the children of the Most High God (v. 35) and are to live in accordance with His standards and, what is of equal importance, by His grace and strength. Even Christians are prone to live as their neighbors live (vv. 32-34) until they see how much better God's way is, and realize that He gives enabling grace for a daily walk in that better way.

III. Its Practice and Reward (vv. 36-38).

Jesus has already admonished His followers to love and serve both friend and foe. The manner in which that is to be put into practice is further developed by urging them to be merciful, not setting themselves up to judge the conduct of others, but rather giving liberally to them in a spirit of love. This does not forbid judging on the part of those whose official duty it is to judge, nor does it set aside the exercise of sound judgment (Isa. 56:1 and I John 4:1), but it does forbid unauthorized and unkind judgment.

"But will all this pay?" asks Dr. Bradbury (in "The Gist of the Lesson") and answers: "Indeed it will . . . The measure that we use in measuring out to others is the very measure God will use in measuring in to us. The reason many of us get so small a blessing from God is that we use such a small measure in our beneficences and blessings to others" (see Phil. 4:19, noting vv. 15-19; II Cor. 9:8, noting vv. 6, 7; and I John 3:22, noting vv. 16-21). "One of the most fundamental conditions of prevailing prayer is generosity in giving. A stingy man cannot be a mighty man of prayer (Prov. 21:13)." Read these verses with care, and they will bring a real blessing to your life.

Giving and Receiving

Give, and it shall be given unto you good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again.—Luke 6:38.

Tinley Park Community NEWS

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our relatives, friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted us during the illness and death of our dear daughter and sweetheart, Edna Schult; the Rev. L. E. Weinreich and Rev. Jochum pastors; Mrs. Edwin Hirsch and Mrs. P. Jochum, singer and organist, and those who donated the use of their cars and for the beautiful flowers.

GEORGE W. SCHULTZ AND FAMILY AND CHARLES LORENZ.

Twenty-fourth Annual Roll Call November 11 to 30, 1940.

The annual visit to all homes of the community will be made again this year. We are asking all those who are employed outside our village, to reserve their memberships for their home drive, so that our community receipts may be enlarged.

We have set no goal in this year's roll call other than an invitation to join, to every man and woman in our community and surrounding country homes.

We made a generous response for war stricken peoples, enabling the Red Cross to ship tons of medicines, foodstuffs and clothing to war zones now it becomes necessary to support those services benefiting the United States. Our annual membership drive.

Our volunteer workers are putting forth every effort for a large contribution, which can only be accomplished by every one doing his or her part. Want you do this?

Our Red Cross Class on "Foods and Nutrition" is meeting every Thursday with an attendance of 25.

Plans are well under way for a class in Home Hygiene and care of the Sick, in the near future.

Inquiry has been made relative to Red Cross sewing and knitting. More about this service later.

—Red Cross Chairman.

Mrs. Walter Egbert the former Miss Lorraine Siebrandt, was honored by Miss Ruth Eggert, Mrs. Chas. Eggert, Sr., Mrs. Chas. Eggert, Jr., Mrs. Arthur Eggert and Mrs. Kuch with a miscellaneous shower in the Hatch Hall in Mokena last Friday night.

The hall was decorated in green and pink. Aeroplane bunco was played and prizes were later awarded to the bride. A luncheon was served and later Harold Balaz furnished the music for dancing.

The bride received many beautiful gifts. There were about 85 people present.

The Ladies Aid of the Zion Lutheran church met Wednesday afternoon. The following blanket club awards were made: Althea Hopman, Elmer Hopman, Mrs. H. Bruggermann and Mrs. Charles Nielsen.

At the close of the meeting the members of the Ladies Aid attended a tea held at the new Methodist church.

Sunday afternoon, Nov. 3rd, the Misses Pearl and Dorothy Wille were hostesses at a bridal shower given in their home in honor of Miss Bernilda Stuckey.

The home was beautifully decorated in the 4H club colors, green and white and those in attendance were 4H Club members. The table was daintily decorated with green favors at each place in which a catchy fortune was hidden.

After the opening of the gifts, games were played. Each of the girls presented the bride with a favorite recipe. (A can opener was also presented by the president just in case the recipe didn't work.)

A delicious lunch consisting of sandwiches, salad and cookies was served. The guests departed wishing the bride that the things she had learned in 4H work would soon prove to be a real asset in her future life.

Ernest Rice and son Forrest left Tuesday morning on an automobile trip to Erie, Pa., where they will visit with the former's sisters.

The Tinley Park PTA met Friday afternoon. The new year books were given out to the members.

Bert Fulton, Chas. Wallin and J. C. Funk attended a meeting in Midlothian the forepart of the week in regards to a plan to have the next state legislature create a law to provide state aid for a maintenance fund for each district.

The Village Board will hold their regular board meeting next Tuesday night.

James Fulton, one of the oldest residents of Tinley Park, passed his 82nd birthday the past week. He is quite active and keenly interested in the affairs of the day. The birthday anniversary was quietly observed by members of the family.

Rev. Martin Frick and family have moved to their new charge in Chicago. Rev. Mr. Frick served as pastor of the Trinity Lutheran church at Bachelors Grove for a number of years succeeding Rev. Wm. Greve. His many friends here wish him much success in his new charge.

Roller skating for the winter season started last Friday evening at the Saenger Hall under new management.

Roller skating parties will be held every Wednesday, Friday and Sunday nights.

Last Sunday special Reformation services were held in the Zion Lutheran church.

The league is progressing and if we could be allowed a little more time, we could easily take care of 30 or more bowlers. You know we have a waiting list and regret that we cannot make room for them. Our bowlers come from Homewood, Chicago Heights, Tinley Park, Harvey, Blue Island and Thornston.

We want to thank Mr. Wesley Stemm for his co-operation in giving his boys a non-pep tea last week.

Really boys, you do bother us and we'll see that Santa fills both stockings for you this Xmas, if you keep up the good work.

Ice Skating At Chicago Arena

Last Wednesday afternoon marked the fifth anniversary opening of public indoor ice skating at the Chicago Arena, 400 East Erie St., Chicago.

In offering this sports facility twice daily at 2:30 and 8:30 p. m., to people of the middle west, the Arena finds itself in the unique position of being the only building in Chicago presenting this type of like underhanded opponents.

Everything has been done for the convenience of the skater. Check rooms are available. Locker rooms, ably attended, are handily located to the ice surface, and for skaters who wish to rent skates the Arena's Sport Shop carries a wide variety of sizes and types. The Sport Shop also handles a complete line of every leading manufacturer of figure and rink skates, as well as skating togs and other accessories, and in addition to this facility, the skate shop has on its staff at all times one of the country's finest skate sharpeners who uses the most modern sharpening equipment. Refreshments may be obtained at either the Arena grill, cocktail lounge or lobby-stand.

Many social organizations, clubs, and large manufacturing companies have realized that a skating party is something new, different, and definitely entertaining. Consequently a sizable list of reservations for private parties this year has already accumulated.

One popular feature of skating at the Arena is the regular Monday evening "Beginner's Night". On these nights forty expert instructors will be available at no charge. At all times competent guards are on the ice, and will gladly help the novice skaters.

Pair skating enthusiasts have gotten a new thrill when they've tried waltzes, tangos, the fourteen step and other numbers to the music of Edna Sellers at the Arena's $50, 000 Wurlitzer organ. Why not arrange now to come to the Arena? Ask your group's secretary to make up a party. All inquiries will receive special attention. For further information write or call James Gowdy at the Arena, DELaware 8500. He will be glad to work out an evening's program of skating, dancing in the Arena's ball-room and bowling for you.

"November's the month," says Miss Betty Baum, home service advisor to (left) George Lynch, Public Service Company division gas sales manager and R. R. Smith, dealer representative. Public Service Company and gas appliance dealers are sponsoring the fourth annual Blue Flame celebration which features special gas demonstrations the week of November 11-16 and extra displays in gas stores the entire month.

Scheduled this year for the entire month of November, the fourth annual Blue Flame celebration is now on in Public Service gas stores and neighborhood gas appliance dealers. An innovation in this year's Blue Flame activity is the "unfinished jingle" contest with prizes of gas refrigerator and clothes dryer to the winners.

Martin W. Dierson, Chicago Heights district superintendent of the Public Service store at 10 Illinois Street.

"The purpose of the fourth Blue Flame exposition," said the Public Service official, "is the same as in the past—to introduce 1941 gas ranges, refrigerators, ironers and water heaters to the people of this vicinity. Inaugurated in 1937, the celebration has since become an event anticipated by homemakers.

The high spot of this year's Blue Flame will be every-afternoon cooking demonstrations, Monday through Saturday, the week of Nov. 11th. "We look for hundreds of entries in the 'unfinished jingle' contest offered this year as an added Blue Flame feature. Rules are simple—gas appliance dealers or Public Service gas stores can furnish entry blanks and details on the big contest.

"Blue Flame souvenirs—new cooking and hot water recipes, bridge pads, yardsticks and other Mementoes—will be available for visitors to the store; children will receive balloons as gifts."

In addition to this cooking program, displays and demonstrations will be going on thruout November at Public Service stores and neighborhood gas appliance dealers, the district superintendent stated.

NEW LENOX BOWLING CHATTER

Cheerio fans, ten pin knocker downers and many who want to listen. Spread out your ears and gather in the latest gossip about this hyar game we are all playing.

It seems we have in our midst one who must be the super-ultra bowler of all times. He claims he is the best bowler in all New Lenox and offers to play any and all comers at five bucks per game. There is big bet brother and I would caution you to take it easy pal. Some of the boys don't like bragging and are about to take you up on that and may relieve you of some of your bucks.

I was watching Papke plant the ball among the pins last week. Pretty good too. He should be a good planter, he is in the seed business. Frank Sweet is a sweet bowler even if he does bowl for Tart. I always thought sweet and tart were opposite. Bob Zier is careful not to foul. He is afraid if he falls down he will hurt his head on the number one pin. He has lot of altitude.

Wonder if Webster has the stomachache ache, notice how he clutches the ball against his stomach before he throws it.

Heard a story over at the Royal Blue about Boynton and spaghetti v s Bowling. seems that the spaghetti won. Ask Luke, he'll tell you. Just heard Bowler Haheny was appointed trustee for New Lenox Fire district. Congratulations.

Hear Mel Whitaker has a new ball. Better get a wood-pecker and some wormy pins Mel, you might do better. Ever notice the speed on Jensen's ball? Slow it down son and improve your score. Heard Fitzer practices at home with milk bottles and coconuts, break it and get fitz.

Hear that one team is still against the handicap. Don't forget boys it is as fair for one team as the other and it will benefit you as much as it will hurt you.

Did you ever hear about the man back years ago who had only one arm and rolled 23 consecutive strikes? He had a real handicap but he made the best of it.

See you later, Ten Pin.

Greeks Have A Word For It At Roxy Theatre

Yes, even the Greeks had words for it, a colossal musical comedy entitled, "The Boys from Syracuse" upholding the rib-tickling and merth provoking performances of Martha "Moutha" Raye and Joe Penner, coming to the Roxy Theatre, at Lockport, Sunday and Monday.

This picture was made from a Broadway comedy fiesta, which is so unusual that you cannot afford to miss it. It is a 2500 year old backgrounded cinema story played to a modern pattern, streamlining the classical scenes into a scream-lined comedy. Contrast is the spice of comedy and the span between that age and this age are so broad that the spices of merth are most prevalent. The story involves a domestic mixup from a double identity, which sparkles with comedy at every turn and finishes to a roaring climax.

Tuesday, one day only, the Roxy will feature "Blondie Has Servant Trouble", a merry-madcap family affair involving the comic strip Bumsteads, with Arthur Lake and Penny Singleton. The Roxy will also give away that Thanksgiving Dinner free.

This Friday, Saturday afternoon and evening, George O'Brien will grace the Roxy screen in, "The Stage to Chino", a fast moving western drama to the tune of whistling lead and flying hoofs and fists. The second feature will be, "Dr. Christian Meets the Woman", with Jean Hershol, which explodes an expose of fake reducing agents for women.

A Typical Indoor Auction Crowd In The Ingraham Place

There is one place where auctions are held every week all the year thru, rain or shine and that place is at 159th St. and Wolf road in Orland township and is conducted every Wednesday night by Fred Ingraham.

In good weather the sales, which are held at night, are held in the open surrounding a large store house and in cold and inclement weather the auction sales are held indoors. Flood lights light up the place like day.

It is interesting to see the variety of articles which are sold each week. You can buy almost anything from baby buggies, dishes, household utensils up to cattle, horses and farm machinery.

Buyers come from many miles around, some coming from Manhattan, Joliet, and points beyond.

A News-Bulletin caught the above picture while the auction was in full blast recently. Mr. Ingraham and Chos, Erickson who serve as auctioneers are shown facing the camera man. The picture gives a good idea of the size crowds which attend these sales.

Mr. Ingraham has been conducting these weekly auctions for over a year and they have proved so popular that large crowds are noted right along.

Even if you are not interested in buying any thing at the moment it will be well worth your while to attend one of these sales and just see what is going on. It will be worth your while.

Wrestling Show

Three top-flight wrestling bouts will comprise this Friday night's professional mat show at Eagles Hall, Grove and Artesian sts., in Blue Island.

Oki Shikina, Oriental master of the jiu jitsu and nerve paralyzing holds, will face eccentric "Dizzy" Davis of Houston, Texas, in the main event.

Sharing double wind-up honors will be Karol Krauser, former Polish Olympic champion and army officer and Rudy Kay, Chicago strong man. Both bouts will be of the 60 minute duration.

"Lefty" Pacer, Ohio college star, and Dale Haddock, "Gentleman" of the South, are paired in the third match. Pacer is a fast, clever and capable of going places in the heavyweight division. Haddock is of the exorbitant type and a free mixer when the going gets tough.

Davis has been victorious in two previous Eagles Hall shows, having whipped Bill Canny and Kid Chapman. Shikina pinned Pete Baltran in his last show at the Blue Island arena, with his famous nerve renter grip. Oki rendered the powerful Lithuanian unconscious with the "sleeper" hod.

Both the Oriental and Houstonian have been unbeaten in Chicago.

"Fur" is expected to fly when the Southerner attempts foul tactics on the cool Jap who seems to like underhanded opponents.

It should be a good show. Matchmaker "Stubby" Gahn says it is the best card he has ever promoted. Doors will open at 7:30. The bouts will start at 8:15.

stables of both this country and Canada. They will be held every evening throughout the eight day run of the Exposition as well as on four afternoons.

Sheep herding performances by the world's champion sheep dog, trick riding, and parades of magnificent beef cattle and draft horses will be included on each of these programs.

AFTER THE FOOTBALL GAME
See Recipes Below.

If you are entertaining the crowd after the game, you'll find substantial refreshments in favor; for the same crisp air that puts football players on their toes breeds keen appetites.

It's good social strategy to arrange everything buffet style and let the guests help themselves. You'll want a table that is festive, easy to handle, and yet casual. You may even want to set up card tables in the living room to make your guests comfortable after they have helped themselves from the buffet.

Natural colored linen, or rough homespun cloth will make a smart background for your serving table. Candles are often used very effectively, when serving buffet style, for they add both atmosphere and light. If you double as hostess and chief cook, you'll enjoy the game twice as much if you plan a menu that can be prepared beforehand. Sandwich makings and a hot steaming beverage are a wise choice. Then wind up the feast with ice cream and chocolate cake.

Frankfurter Sandwich.

Boil or steam large frankfurters until tender and juicy. Slice thin on white or rye bread and serve with mustard sauce and hot potato salad. Garnish with pickle.

Hot Potato Salad.

(Serves 6)
6 medium-sized potatoes
4 slices bacon (minced)
1 medium-sized onion (sliced)
2 tablespoons bacon drippings
1/4 cup water
1/2 cup vinegar
1 teaspoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
Cook potatoes in jackets. Cool, skin, and slice. Pan broil minced bacon, then saute onion in bacon drippings until brown. Combine and heat water, vinegar, sugar, salt, and pepper. Add to mixture in frying pan, and mix with potatoes. Place in baking dish and heat in moderate oven (350 degrees) before serving.

Egg Meringue Surprise Sandwich.

(Serves 6)
6 slices bread
1/4 cup butter (melted)
1/4 pound sharp cheese
6 eggs
Salt and pepper
6 slices bacon
Trim slices of bread and brush one side with melted butter. Place buttered side down on a cookie sheet. Cut cheese into strips about 1/4 inch in thickness. Arrange them, side by side, or fence-like on the bread. Separate eggs and drop one egg yolk in the center of each slice of bread. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Whip egg whites until stiff and dry, and pile high on top, completely covering the egg and cheese. Cut the slices of bacon into halves and place two halves on each sandwich right across the egg white. Place in moderate oven (350 degrees) and bake for 10 to 15 minutes, or until the egg white is brown and the bacon is crisp.

Silver Cake.

(Makes 1 loaf cake)
3/4 cup butter
1 1/2 cups granulated sugar
2 3/4 cups cake flour (sifted)
3 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
4 egg whites (stiffly beaten)
Cream butter, add sugar and beat well. Sift the flour, baking powder and salt together, and add to sugar and butter mixture. Mix well, and place in refrigerator. When desired for use, remove mixture from refrigerator. Break up lumps with fork. Add milk and vanilla, and beat until mixture is smooth and creamy. Then fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into greased loaf cake tin, and bake in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees) for about 50 minutes.

Chocolate Peppermint Frosting.

2 squares unsweetened chocolate
1 1/2 cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
8 marshmallows (cut in quarters)
Few drops oil of peppermint
Melt chocolate in top of double boiler. Add sweetened condensed milk, stir over rapidly boiling water 5 minutes, or until the mixture thickens. Add marshmallows, and stir until they begin to melt. Remove from heat and add peppermint. Cool. Spread on cold cake. This frosting covers tops of 2 9-inch layers or top and sides of loaf cake generously, or about 24 cup cakes.

Vanilla Ice Cream.

(Makes 1 quart)
2 cups milk
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 egg yolks (well beaten)
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
1 cup whipping cream
Scald milk, reserving 1/2 cup. Mix and blend the sugar, flour, and salt, and mix to a smooth paste with the cold milk which was reserved. Add this mixture to the scalded milk and cook, stirring constantly until thick, in a double boiler for 15 minutes. Add egg yolks which have been well beaten and cook, stirring constantly, 3 minutes longer. Add vanilla and chill. Fold in the whipping cream which has been whipped, place in ice cream freezer and freeze, using 3 parts ice to 1 part rock salt.

Sausages in Pastry Blankets.

(Makes 8 sausage rolls)
1 1/2 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 cup shortening
3 tablespoons cold water (approximately)
8 pork sausages
Sift together the flour, salt and baking powder. Blend in the shortening. Then add just enough water to form a dough, mixing lightly. Roll out and cut into 8 oblong pieces, each sufficiently large to wrap around one link of sausage. Place individual sausages (well pricked) on individual pieces of pastry; fold ends over and roll up. Place folded side down on a baking sheet. Prick crust with a fork. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for about 30 minutes. Serve very hot.

Baked custards should be tested with a knife. When knife comes out of the center of custard clean, then it is done.

THE DICTATOR AT HOME

Dictator (returning home after a bumpious day)—Hail! Remember you're not at the chancellery now. Dictator—Do you realize to whom you are speaking? Wife—I'm the only person who does!

Dictator (still unable to shake off the dictator mood)—My smoking jacket, please! Wife—You know where it is, don't you?

Dictator—Get it for me at once, Ella.

Wife—Get it yourself. You're no cripple.

Dictator—I warn you, you are exhausting my patience.

Wife—Aw, cut out that line, Toots!

Dictator (wincing)—Toots!

Wife—You never used to object to me calling you that.

Dictator—That was away back before I . . . before, I, er . . .

Wife—Before you got all those uniforms, emblems and ideas for salutes. You were a nice boy in those days. Little did I ever dream you'd turn out like this.

Dictator—There you go belittling me again!

Wife—I'm not belittling you.

Dictator—Yes you are. (He lights a cigar.)

Wife (sternly)—Put out that nickel stogie! You know better than to smoke in the living room.

Dictator—I'll smoke where I wish. This is my house.

Wife—Lissen, you either put that roman candle out or you go out on the back porch and smoke it. And no back talk!

Dictator (who knows when he is licked)—Oh, all right, but I want it understood that my action is not to be misinterpreted as a sign of weakness. I am not establishing a precedent. I know my rights and . . .

Wife—Aw, Joe, pipe down! You sound so silly.

Dictator—I resent your studied attempts to undermine my self-confidence. It's not very nice of you.

Wife—You've got me wrong, Joe. All I want you to understand is that you can't get away with all that boss of the universe stuff with me. I know you when.

Dictator—You ought to be proud of me.

Wife—Why?

Dictator—Look what I've done! Look where I've risen! And all on my own ability.

Wife—Gee, but you've got a swelled head. Don't I get any credit? Who designed that emblem? I did. Who thought up that color scheme for the shirts? Me. Who sat up with you night after night studying history and trying to point out Napoleon's mistakes?

Dictator—Have we got to go over all that again? You helped me, I admit. But I had to have brains.

Wife—Baloney. All you had to have was a radio and your nerve.

Dictator—Let's not argue. Is my steak ready?

Wife—What makes you think you're getting steak?

Dictator—I told you I wanted steak tonight.

Wife—So what? You're getting cold roast beef.

Dictator—I will not have my orders ignored with impunity. I will not be treated so contemptuously. I will not permit my authority to be disrespected.

Wife—If you knew how funny you looked talking that way, you'd cut it out, Toots.

Dictator—Don't call me Toots. Do you know what millions of people are calling me? They are calling me their hope, their idol, their peerless leader!

Wife—Yeah. And do you remember what the boys used to call you back in your boyhood days?

Dictator—What?

Wife—Peewee!

Dictator—This is too much. I'll go down to the palace where the boys respect me for what I am.

Wife—Okay, as long as you don't bring 'em up here.

It Must Be Admitted That Clerk Had No Snap of Job

The theatrical agent's new clerk entered the private room and said, "There's a lady waiting to see you, sir."

"Is she good-looking?"

"Yes, sir."

"Show her in."

Ten minutes later the clerk was summoned.

"Well," said the agent, gruffly, "you're a nice judge of beauty, I must say."

"Ah, but I had to be careful, sir. I've got to look after my job. For all I knew, she might have been your wife."

"Yes," said the agent, acidly, "she was."

Transforming a Box Into Smart Ottoman

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

PAD the top of a box and slip-cover it; then add a separate cushion three inches thick. The result will be a smart ottoman that either may match or contrast with the cover of your favorite chair. The little feet made of drawer pulls keep the ottoman from looking like a box. A corded seam where the skirt of the slip cover joins the top, and an inverted pleat at each corner of the skirt also give a professional touch. I suggest tacking the slip cover firmly in place as shown in the sketch.

If down or feathers are used to fill the separate cushion, make an inner cushion of ticking with a top and a bottom piece the size of the box top; and a straight three-inch piece around the sides. If kapok is used for filling, this inner cushion may be made of muslin.

NOTE: These directions should be clipped from the paper as they are not available in booklet form. However, complete directions for making slip covers and for making corded seams are in SEWING, Book No. 1. No. 3 also contains valuable slip cover suggestions. These 32-page booklets are 10c each. Tinley Methodist Dedication church fellowship and unity was indeed very impressive and is deeply appreciated as it means much for the community.

Visiting pastors and Rev. Mr. Jochum, former pastor of the Tinley German Methodist church had seats of honor on the platform.

A buffet supper was served at 5:30 o'clock in the social hall.

Many people from Orland, Mokena and other nearby towns attended the afternoon service.

In the evening the services were preceded by organ melodies played by Mrs. Percy Jochum, the church organist who played at all of the services.

Rev. G. Gerhold, pastor of the St. Peter's Evangelical and Reformed church of Frankfort and many members of his congregation were present. Rev. Mr. Gerhold brought a message of congratulations and emphasized the fact that it takes faith and courage in these days to launch out on an enterprise like the building of a new church.

The evening message was delivered by Rev. L. F. W. Leseman, Director of the Chicago Training school. At this service Mr. Milton was again the soloist.

Tuesday evening, Nov. 5th a home coming and roll call with a covered dish supper was held in the social hall.

At eight o'clock a dedication service of the memorial windows and historical pulpit took place in the sanctuary. The pulpit the handiwork of Mr. Crist of Tinley Park, is a perfect piece of art of cabinet work. The wood used is about 100 years old, being taken from a desk belonging at one time to the present pastor's grandfather. The address was given by Rev. Charles R. Ross, minister of the Morgan Park church.

Presentation of the windows was made by John Swisher, chairman of the building committee. The presentation of the pulpit was made by George F. Weinreich. The dedication of the memorials was in charge of Rev. Charles R. Ross.

Wednesday afternoon the ladies of the church entertained the ladies aid groups of neighboring churches, the Tinley Park Woman's Club, the PTA and other groups.

In the evening the presentation of the window group was made by Mrs. Ada Schellhase, local president of the Women's Society of Christian Service. The acceptance of dedication was made by Mrs. James Oldshue. The address of the evening was given by Mrs. Oldshue.

The special services of the week will be climaxed this Friday night which has been set aside as Youth night. A buffet supper and fellowship will be held at 5:30 in the social hall. At eight o'clock in the sanctuary the dedication of the communion table and rail in memory of Ralph Andres. There is to be a candle light service in charge of Marvin Bettenhausen and Russell Johnson. The memorials will be presented by Russell Andres assisted by Violet Bettenhausen, Vernon Brandau. The dedication will be made by Rev. Horace Greeley Smith. The Boy Scouts will be the ushers.

The beautiful carpet was a gift from Hirsch Brothers, owners of the Hirsch Funeral Home in Tinley Park.

Among those who worked and contributed generously is W. C. Hollstein, well known Tinley Park insurance man.
